Pour, prep. for, because of, upon the account of, for the sake of, considering, in favour of, in behalf of, on the side of. Pour cela (malgré cela), nevertheless, for all that; (pour cette raison) for that reason, therefore. Pour cet effet, therefore, and therefore. Pour le moins (du moins), at least. Pour lors, then, at that time. Pour l'heure (pour le présent), for the present, as for now. Chambre pour chambre, j'aime mieux celle-ci que l'autre, since I must have one of these two rooms, I like this better than the other. Mourir pour mourir, il vaut mieux mourir en combattant qu'en fuyant, when a man must die, it is better for him to die in fighting than in running away.

✎ Pour will in general be properly used with respect to verbs:— 1st. when asking the question why or what for? after what precedes, the infinitive will come in answer, though the English corresponding expression for chiefly requires the participle present. He will do any thing to oblige you (he will do any thing, why? or what for?—to oblige you), il fera tout pour vous obliger. Men are born to work as birds to fly. Les hommes sont nés pour travailler, comme les oiseaux pour voler.—2dly. When what precedes the infinitive implies sufficiency or excess. He has not health enough to undertake that, ils n'a pas assez de santé pour entreprendre cela. He has too much good sense to do a thing which would prejudice his family, il a trop de bon sens pour faire une chose qui seroit tort à sa famille. He is very weak to ride on horseback, il est bien faible pour monter à cheval.—3dly. When the agent of the second verb is the very agent of the first, the infinitive may be used with the second; but if the agent of the second be different, the infinitive should not come in, unless we speak indeterminately. Now when the use of the infinitive is to be avoided, because that which is the agent is to be expressed, pour que may be introduced with the subjunctive. I was too unlucky for such a thing to happen to me, j'étois trop malheureux pour qu'une telle chose m'arrivât.—4thly. Sometimes we find one infinitive with pour or afin de, and then another verb in the subjunctive with que (instead of pour que or afin que) because the agent of the second verb is the very agent of the first, but the agent of the third is a different person or thing. Ce que j'en fais c'est pour (afin de) vous convaincre, et que vous n'en doutiez plus, the reason why I do this is that I may convince you, and that you should doubt it no longer.—5thly. Pour ne pas or afin de ne pas may denote fear. Il a pris des mesures pour ne pas échouer dans son entreprise, he has taken measures for not miscarrying (for fear of miscarrying, that he might not miscarry, lest he should miscarry) in his enterprise.—6thly. Pour, with the infinitive, may be used in other circumstances which the following examples will elucidate. Les Scythes, pour être (encore qu'ils soient, parce qu'ils sont), Scythes, cessent-ils d'être des hommes, et pour avoir été (parce qu'ils ont été) nos-ennemis, sont ils indignes de compassion? are not Scythians men, although they are Scythians; and because they have been our enemies, are they unworthy of our compassion? Corée n'attendoit pas qu'elle achevât pour avouer (avant qu'il avouât' mais il avouoit aussitôt), qu'il avoit tort, Corée did not wait till she had done before he confessed (but readily confessed) that he was in the wrong. Souvent pour vouloir (en voulant, parce qu'on veut) être poli, on donne dans l'affaffectation, souventimes in wishing (because one wishes, while one wishes) to be polite, one sinks into affectation. Il faut que vous m'aimiez bien peu, pour vous délier (vous qui vous déliez), ainsi de moi! you must love me very little who can thus distrust me!—7thly. Pour before an adjective or adverb with que and the subjunctive is equivalent to quelque-que or tout-que. Pour protégé qu'il soit (quelque protégé qu'il soit, tout protégé qu'il est), however protected he may be, let him be ever so well protected, protected as he is. Pour aimable qu'il puisse être, however amiable he may be, how amiable soever he may be, let him be ever so amiable, amiable as he may be. (See the observation on Avoir beau at Beau.) Hence it is that pour pou que with the subjunctive may be Englished by if ever so little. Pour peu que je m'étendisse sur cette matière, je pourrois faire voir, &c. if I enlarged (were I to enlarge) ever so little on that subject, I could show, &c. N. S.

Réçiprocité, s. f. reciprocity.

Réçiproque, a. reciprocal, mutual, interchangeable. On appelle verbe réçiproque celui où les pronoms se, nous, vous, signifient en Anglois one another, each other; or la réçiprocité s'annonce avec plusieurs verbes par s'entre, nous entre, vous entre, au lieu des simples se, nous, vous, qui pourroient présenter des ambiguïtés, si l'on n'ajoutoit pas au verbe mutuellement ou réçiproquement, équivalent du mot entre en tête de ces verbes; lequel mot entre devient entr' lorsque le verbe commence par une voyelle.

On peut dire en François s'entr'aimer, to love one another; nous nous entr'aimons, we love one another. Vous vous entr'aimez, ye love one another. Ils s'entr'aiment ou elles s'entr'aiment, they love one another. Et ainsi des autres temps, on peut dire s'entre-blesser, nous nous entre-blessons, vous vous entre-blessez, ils s'entre-blessent. Si l'on disoit simplement s'aimer, cela pourroit signifier non seulement to love one another, mais encore to love one's self, donc nous nous aimons pourroit signifier et we love one another, et we love ourselves. Cette remarque suffira sans doute pour les verbes dont l'infinitif se présente avec s'entre ou s'entr', puisqu'à la valeur du mot qui vient après, lequel mot on peut trouver à sa place alphabétique, il ne s'agit que d'ajouter one another, each other, et quelquefois to one another, to each other; comme dans s'entre-parler, to talk to one another ou talk together. N. S.

Réçiproque, s. m. return, like for like. Je vous rendrai le réçiproque, I shall make you a return, I shall requite you, I shall be even with you.

Réfléchi, e, a. reflected. Les verbes réfléchis perdent ordinairement le pronom signe de reflection après faire, voir, laisser, ouvrir ou entendre, ce qui fait paroi- tre ces verbes réfléchis comme des verbes neutres. V. Cabrer.

Il y a peu de verbes actifs qui ne puissent devenir verbes réflé- chis. Ils le deviennent sur-tout lorsque le verbe neutre manque dans la langue Française et qu'il s'agit des'exprimer dans un sens neutre; ils le deviennent encore lorsqu'il s'agit d'éviter la forme passive sans employer on ou l'on qui de soi-même peut servir à éviter la forme passive. Or les François cherchent naturelle- ment à donner à leurs expres- sions cette activité qui les caracté- rise; et voilà pourquoi quanti- té de phrases passives en Anglois se présentent en François avec un verbe réfléchi, parce qu'un verbe réfléchi n'est autre chose qu'un verbe actif, puisque l'agent s'y voit non seulement au nominatif mais encore à l'accusatif. Retirer, v. a. signifie, to draw back, v. a. ou to withdraw, v. a. or Retirer ne pouvant pas être neutre, les François pour exprimer to retire, v. n. ou to draw back, v. n. ou to withdraw, v. n. disent se retirer, dont la vraie valeur est to draw one's self back, to withdraw one's self. En Anglois l'agent se trouve assez souvent sous-entendu, et le verbe se présente dans un sens passif, dans les occasions où en Fran- çois l'on fait entrer on ou l'on comme agent indéterminé, don- nant au verbe pour accusatif ce qui sert de nominatif en Anglois, ain- si que dans les occasions où, rendant le verbe réfléchi, on lui donne pour nominatif ce qui est le nominatif du verbe Anglois et pour accusatif un pronom qui a rapport à ce même nominatif.

On dira cela demain ou cela se dira demain, est en François l'équiva- lent de cette expression Anglo- ise, that will be told or men- tioned to-morrow, pour people will tell or mention that to-morrow; et ces bus se font à Nottingham, ou bien on fait ces bus à Nottingham, est la même chose que seroit en Anglois, these stockings are made at Nottingham. Remarquez sur- tout que souvent en François, lorsque l'agent peut se sous-entendre, on emploie il pour nomi- natif d'un verbe réfléchi, plaçant ce qui devoit être naturellement le nominatif du verbe réfléchi là où l'on placeroit l'accusatif, et cette sorte de construction est une nouvelle preuve que le génie de la langue Française emploie, autant qu'il est possible, des tours de phrases où le verbe paro- it actif. Un François, pour rendre dans sa langue a consider- able fleet is sitting out at Portsmouth, dira naturellement il s'é- quippe à Portsmouth une flotte considérable, ou bien on équipe à Portsmouth une flotte considérable; pour rendre dans sa langue men are found (ou there are men found) of that very disposition, il dira il se trouve des hommes de ce même caractère, ou bien on trouve des hommes de ce même caracté- re. S'étonnera-t-on main- tenant de voir que les verbes neutres se trouvent souvent pré- sentés en François sous une forme active, ayant il comme une espèce de nominatif d'em- prunt, et comme une espèce d'accusatif ce qui devoit naturel- lement être le nominatif? Un François, pour rendre dans sa langue things which never happen to others are daily happening to me, dira naturellement, il ar- rive tous les jours des choses qui n'arrivent jamais aux autres. Voyez d'ailleurs A et De. La remarque que nous venons de faire sera d'autant plus utile que, dans les dictionnaires, on omet plus de la moitié des verbes réflé- chis, et que dans les gram- mairres, on n'explique pas les dif- férentes voies que s'est frayées le génie François soit pour éviter les ambiguïtés qui résulteroient de la trop fréquente répétition de on ou l'on, soit pour ne pas con- fondre ce qui se fait avec ce qui est fait, soit pour ne pas sortir du vrai caractère de la nation Fran- çoise. Un des traits principaux de ce caractère nous l'avons dit, c'est l'activité. N. S.

 Sanglade, s. f. lash. V. Sangler.
 † Sanglamment, adv. bloodily, cruelly, sadly, grievously.
 Sanglant, e, a. bloody, covered with blood, * cruel, outrageous, deadly, grievous, cutting. La plaie est encore toute sanglante, the wound bleeds still.

 Sangle, s. f. girth. Sangle, Mar. mat or paunch (made of spun yarn).
 Sangler, v. a. to gird, to lash, beat, trounce; (un coup de canne, de plat d'épée, de fouet, à quelqu'un, &c.) to strike or beat (one) with (a cane, &c.).
 Sanglier, s. m. wild boar.
 Sanglot, s. m. sob, sigh, groan, sobbing, sighing, groaning.
 Sangloter, v. n. to sob, sigh, groan.
 Sangsue, s. f. leech, horse-leech; * bloodsucker, oppressor, extortioner.
 Sanguification, s. f. sanguification.
 Sanguin, e, a. sanguine, of a sanguine constitution, red as blood.
 Sanguin, s. m. Et. Les sanguins sont ordinairement joyeux, those of a sanguine constitution are commonly cheerful.
 Sanguinaire, a. bloodthirsty, bloody, cruel, sanguinary.
 Sanguinaire, s. f. blood-wort or knot grass.
 Sanguine, s. f. red lead, bloodstone.
 Sanguinolent, e, a. (il se dit des glaires, &c.) bloody.
 Sanhedrin, s. m. sanhedrim.
 Sanicle, s. f. sanicle, self-heal.
 Sanie, s. f. sanies, matter coming out of a putrefied sore.
 Sanieu-x, se, a. sanious, purulent.
 Saunes, s. m. pl. two sice or sixes.
 Sans, prep. (pour annoncer un défaut d'accompagnement, c'est alors le contraire de avec) without; less, qui placé après le substantif, semble ne faire avec lui qu'un seul mot; (autre, ne comptant pas) beside, besides; (pour annoncer la personne ou la chose qui empêche, a empêché ou empêchera) but for, were it not for, if it were not for, had it not been for, if it had not been for. Donc sans que dans le premier sens peut se renfermer par without; et alors on change ordinairement le nominatif en une espèce d'adjectif ou de cas elliptique et le verbe personnel au subjonctif en un participie présent. Le mot Anglois without signifie littéralement be out, équivalent de sois dehors, ôtez; le mot Anglois less, est l'impératif Saxon les, qui signifie ôtez; on ne s'connera donc pas de voir que sans argent se rend en Anglois par without money ou par moneyless; et sans amis par without friends ou par friendless. Le mot sans avant un infinitif se rend ordinairement par without avec le participe présent ; quelquefois par noté avec l'infinitif : sans parler de, without speaking of, ou not to speak of (pour ne pas parler de) ; sans rien dire, without saying any thing ; sans y penser, without thinking of it, unawares, unwittingly. Il ne fut pas long temps sans (avant de) s'en repentir, he was not long before he repented it. Sans (outré, ne comptant pas) les autres dépenses que j'ai faites, beside the other expenses I have been at. Il le fit sans ma connoissance (ou je ne le savois pas), he did it without my knowledge or without my knowing it. Vous ferez bien cela sans que j'y aille, sure you will do that without my going thither. Il viendra sans que vous l'envoyiez chercher, he will come without your sending for him. Il viendrait sans que votre sœur l'envoyât chercher, he would come without your sister sending for him ou he would come though your sister should not send for him. Je partirais demain sans votre frère, peut, dans le premier sens, se rendre par. I should set out to-morrow without your brother, et dans le troisième sens par I should set out but for your brother. Dans le premier sens, votre frère ne m'accompagneroit pas ; dans le troisième sens, votre frère m'empêche de partir. Donc sans moi, il mourroit de faim (pour il mourroit de faim, mais je l'en empêche par mes secours), doit se rendre par but for me he would starve ou par quelque autre équivalent.

Subjonctif, a. & s. m. subjunctive. Le mode subjonctif ou le subjonctif, s. m. the subjunctive mood or the subjunctive.
The French subjunctive is a stumbling-block to foreigners, nor can the natives of France account properly for its use, except those who have read the works which the editor has lately published; the principal observations of which are as follow.
The French subjunctive is used only on account of a circumlocution by which the verb of that action or situation which is the principal subject of the discourse is (by means of the conjunction que; or of a conjunctive pronoun, such as qui, que, dont, quoi, oi, &c.) rendered dependant on another verb, which deprives it of its natural function or form or of that full tone of some affection of the mind with which that verb would be pronounced if employed singly. Hence (1st) when the imperative or optative force is announced merely by que or by a verb and then a conjunctive expression, the action or situation either commanded or wished for, must be in the subjunctive, because the natural form the French have as to the imperative can be only for the second person either singular or plural, and for the first person plural, each without que. Ex. It is proper you should take your precautions (for take your precautions with the tone of advice) il est à propos que vous preniez vos précautions. 2dly. When the interrogative form without negation is transposed from the main verb or is somehow disguised, and announced by another which is or might be made to precede this, that main verb, thus deprived of its interrogative form, must be in the subjunctive. Ex. Do you believe he intends to speak of it? (being nearly equal to does he intend to speak of it?) crovez-vous qu'il ait dessein d'en parler? 3.ly. When the negative form without interrogation is transposed from the main verb or is somehow disguised, and announced by another verb, which is or might be made to precede this, that main verb, thus deprived of its negation, must be in the subjunctive: now, after most of the superlative expressions, the subjunctive appears in French, because those expressions which are really superlative imply that the qualities of the individual mentioned do not exist in the same degree in the other individuals. Ex. I do not believe that he intends to speak of it (being nearly equal to he does not intend to speak of it) je ne crois pas qu'il ait dessein d'en parler. He is the greatest orator I ever knew (I never knew a greater orator), c'est le plus grand orateur que j'aie jamais connu. 4.ly. When the main verb might appear or should naturally appear in an affirmative or nearly affirmative manner, but when the sentence has been begun negatively or in a manner equivalent, it is obvious that a deviation from the natural form has taken place; therefore the main verb must be in the subjunctive; and, if the main verb is not negative in itself, as the previous force of the negation or its equivalent must be destroyed, another ne must be used with the subjunctive, whereby the sense of the whole sentence is brought back to be affirmative or nearly so. Ex. I do not see any body but agrees that he is rash (every body agrees that he is rash), je ne vois personne qui ne convienne qu'il est téméraire. 5.ly. Nature has endowed us with a particular tone of the voice and expression of countenance for every affection of the mind; she has pointed out to us that this tone and change of countenance ought to accompany the verb which causes the affection of pleasure, displeasure, fear, horror, surprise, &c. therefore, if the tone be announced by a verb which is made or might be made to precede that main verb which creates the affection, that tone and the expression of the countenance will be considerably lessened by the construction of the sentence, and consequently the subjunctive must be used with the main verb, because it becomes deprived of that tone, or at least of part of that tone, which should naturally accompany it. Now, whether the affection be announced affirmatively or negatively, &c. is a point which is quite immaterial. I am sorry that he is come (he is come! pronounced with the tone of sorrow), Je suis fâché qu'il soit venu.

The intelligent reader will easily perceive by the second and third observations that as a negative form has the same power with an interrogative form, it may be inferred that a verb used negatively and interrogatively at the same time has no more influence upon the other verb governed by it than that verb could have if employed simply in the affirmative form; he will easily perceive that dubitative expressions are to be considered as interrogative expressions, upon recollecting that doubts can be cleared up only by enquiries, &c. N. S.

The preceding observations will be found fully elucidated in that work of the editor, which is entitled, Grammaire Angloise comparée avec la Grammaire Française, from p. 240 to 246. As to those conjunctions which are found attended with the subjunctive, the same work may be consulted from p. 167 to 177, where it will be clearly perceived that the cause is quite natural. The editor's Guide pour la langue Angloise et pour la langue Française may also be consulted. In his Développement de l'usage de la particule Française &c. p. 126 of that Guide, he has also touched upon the subjunctive, and quoted such authorities as to make it impossible to question the rules laid down.

Tenir v. n. to hold, hold fast, be fastened, stick; (être contigu) to be close together, be contiguous; (demeurer) to keep, remain; (être d'opinion) to hold, be of opinion, think, believe; (être compris dans un espace) to hold, be contained; (parlant d'assemblées, de foires, &c.) to sit, be kept or hold; (parlant des considérations, des obstacles qui empêchent de faire) to stick, hinder, prevent, be the fault of, be the difference, be the matter. A quoi tint-il que je ne vous batte, what prevents me from beating you? I have a good mind to beat you. Il tint à peu de chose (il ne tint presque à rien), qu'ils ne se battissent, they were very near coming to blows. Faire tenir (envoyer, faire remettre), to send, convey, cause to be delivered. Tenir de quelqu'un, to hold of one, depend upon one; also take after one or be like one, be of the nature of. Tenir, tenir bon, tenir ferme (résister, se défendre), to hold, hold out, stand, stand out, bear, resist. En tenir (être pris, être attrapé), to be caught. Tenez (prenez), here, take it; (écoutez) hark ye; (regardez) lo, look, see, behold. Tenir, Mar. Tenir le vent ou le lof, to work to windward, keep the luff, keep the wind, keep the ship close to the wind. Tenir le plus près, to keep close to the wind. Tiens-toi ferme sur la vergue du petit hunier, hold yourself fast upon the fore top-sail yard. Tiens ce bâtiment par le bossoir de dessous le vent, keep that vessel on the lee bow. Ce vent ne tiendra pas, this wind will not hold. Si ce vaisseau tient le vent, il faut que nous arrivions, if that ship keeps her luff, we must bear up. Nous tenons ce vaisseau en lui donnant la grande voile, we hold way with that ship, and spare her the main sail. Nous tiendrons ce brig sous notre écoute en attendant que le temps nous permette de le visiter, we will keep this brig under our lee till the weather will permit us to board her. Le fond étant curé, nos ancres ne tinrent pas, the ground being hard, our anchors did not hold. Le vent par travers, peu de bâtimens peuvent nous tenir, with the wind a-beam, few ships can keep way with us. En tenant toujours au même point de relèvement un bâtiment que l'on chasse sous le vent, on le joint par le chemin le plus court, by constantly keeping in the same point of bearing a vessel you are in chase of to leeward, you take the quickest method of coming up with her. Pour parer le bas fond il faut tenir les deux amers l'un par l'autre, to go clear of the shoal, you must keep the two marks in one. Ce bâtiment a tenu bon dans le grain sans rien amener, that vessel has not started anything in the squall. Notre grément n'est pas tenu, our rigging wants setting up. Les balancines de grande vergue ne sont pas tenues, the main lifts are all slack. Les haubans du bâton de foc sont-ils bien-tenus? are the gib-guys well up? Les bras du petit perroquet sont-ils tenus? are the fore top-gallant braces steadied? Voilà une frégate qui est bien tenue, there is a frigate which is in high order. Dictionnaire Royal.

SECONDE PARTIE,

Qui continet l'ANGLAIS avant le FRANÇOIS.

A B A

A B D

A (première lettre de l'alphabet, a, m.—(espèce d'article ou d'adjectif. employé, au lieu d'an, avant un mot qui commence par toute autre voyelle qu'un y, ou par un h muette) un, m; une, f. Voyez, An.—On trouve a ou an employé tantôt pour le ou la, et tantôt pour du de la; To wear a sword, porter l'épée; Is there a fire in the parlour? Ya-t-il du feu dans la salle? Souvent a ou an se trouve employé pour le, la, dans le sens de par ou de pour chaque; Twice a day, deux fois le jour ou deux fois par jour; That lace will cost half a guinea a yard, cette dentelle coûtera une demi-guinée la verge.—Ce même a ou an semble être explétif dans plusieurs tours de phrase: What a man you are! Quel homme vous êtes! On trouve many a ou many an avec un nom singulier, au lieu du simple many avec un nom pluriel; Many a person, pour many persons, plusieurs personnes, bien des personnes, beaucoup de personnes, plus d'une personne.

A se trouve quelquefois employé comme préposition, et par conséquent pour at, on, in, &c. He is a hunting, il est à la chasse ou il est à chasser. Ou ce mot a entre souvent en composition de manière que, joint à un autre mot, l'un et l'autre semblent ne faire qu'un seul mot; il y a toutefois des écrivains qui mettent un tiret après a. On trouve donc, He is a-bed, et he is a-bed, il est au lit: On trouve a-head, pour in dread; aboard pour on board of, &c. Dans adry, on voit que a signifie dans cet état qu'annonce le mot dry: donc afar off signifie dans cet état qu'annonce far off.

Aback, Mar. (on the back.) Sur le mât coiffé, masqué, vent dessus (parlant des voiles;) the fore top-sail is aback, le petit hunier est sur le mât ou coiffé; that ship has thrown all aback, ce vaisseau est tout masqué; to lay a sail aback, coiffer une voile, mettre sur le mât une voile, mettre le vent sur une voile. Lay all flat aback, masquer tout, brasse tout à culer.

Abaft, Mar. arrière, en arrière de, en arrière, del'arrière; abaft the main mast, en arrière du grand mât; from abaft the bits to the gun-room, de l'arrière des bittes jusqu'à la Sainte-Barbe.

If I can but hold my tongue, pourvu que je puisse me taire. He can read and write, il sait lire et écrire.

How can you tell? comment le savez-vous? It is more than I can tell, je n'en sais rien, c'est ce que je ne sais pas. Nobody can tell persoune n'en sait rien. I can find him no where, je ne le saurais trouver. Can you never be satisfied? ne serez-vous jamais content? Make all the haste you can, faites tout la diligence possible. He is aslike him as can be, il lui ressemble tout-à-fait ou parfaitement. That is the safest course that can be, c'est la voie la plus assurée. As sure as can be, sans doute, indubiablement, très-assurément. As soon as can be, aussitôt qu'il se pourra, au plutôt, au premier jour. He is as bad as can be, il est aussi méchant qu'on puisse l'être, il ne saurait être plus méchant. They can ill away with it, cela les fâche extrêmement, ils ont bien de la peine à le digérer.

You cannot but know it, il n'est pas possible que vous l'ignoriez. Cannot you hold your tongue? ne souriez-vous vous taire?

One cannot tell which way it will go, on ne sait pas quelle en sera l'issue. I cannot but laugh, when I see him, je ne puis m'empêcher de rire quand je le vois. It cannot be, cela ne peut pas être, cela est impossible
