INSULA ae f I An island Cic II A house without a court in front and detached buildings such as are most of the houses in our cities an townships whether built alone or connected with others by a partition wall The insulae at Rome were situated for the most part in the houses behind the large mansion (domus) of a common proprietor and the houses forming them were let either whole or in apartments to tenants of more limited means Cic de Domo It remains to be observed that also several houses standing close to each other in so far as they belonged to one proprietor (insulae domus) were called insulae That such an insula could have been connected with another by a common partition wall may perhaps be doubted There was always between each insula a small space which however was frequently so narrow that no one could pass along it Varro L L 5 5 Ter Adhpc 4 2 39

Plaut I e and I e qui magister equitum viderere is per municipia curriat Cic N B I It frequently agrees with its predicate ea causa belli fut, that was the Liv for id is denique honos mihi videri solet Cic.
2 It is used with a substantive in the same number gender and case although it refers to another word quae vestigalia locassent ea rata locatio for eorum Liv ea libera conlocassent de ea rata id It also frequently agrees with a substantive connected with and put Immediate after quod quae quod e g ea quae gemma dicitur Cic that which is called 3 It is also redundant before quod quae quod particularly we often find id quod for quod e g si nos id quod debet nostra patria delectat Cic this id however is by no means altogether redundant but connected with quod it denotes a parenthesis, id quod debet and that ought to be the case. Id quod means also wherefore or since Ter Is is redundant in other instances also quod ne id facere posses Cic quorum eorum unus Plaut thus also quid est quo non codem progrediatu Cic especially when it comes after any thing late in the sentence urbem novam conditam vi et armis iure eam condere parat Liv nescire quid acciderit id est semper esse puerum Cic On the contrary it is omitted nunc redeo ad quae mihi mandas for ad ea quae &c id 4 Id is frequently used as a substantive and so with a genitive ad id locorum Liv or ad id i e up to that time as yet to the present time ad id diei Gell at that time of day especially when it may be rendered such id temporis Cic at that time at such a time homo id etatis id of that id for propter id Therefore on that account id prodeo Ter id gaudeo Cic also for in eo etiam in that Plaut also for ad id or ejus rei e g idne vestis autoris mihi? Ter I e do you advise me to that? Id is also redundant id adjuva me quo &c id especially before an accusative and infinitive Cesarum id nun-ciatum esset eos per provinciam inter facere Cms again in id for that purpose Liv ex eo scire that hence Cic id est that is that is to say in explanations hodie id est Cal Oct Cic Idque for id quoque Tac Suetonius uses this id est frequently when he would define more closely any thing previously said in a more general manner, and then it may sometimes be rendered Namque

Cic again in eo on the postum quum iam in eo est id &c Nep non est in eo Cic is not so in eo est means also it consists it depends upon Cic cum eo with that limitation or condition Liv 8 Sometimes it is used for the reciprocal pronoun se meruisse ut et &c for sibi Cic quum viderent de eorum virtute non dubitari for sua Nep 9 Eum postulare ut sibi dedatur for postulare ut sibi &c Liv 10 It sometimes refers to a substantive which has not been expressed but is contained in the preceding verb quid sentiam — ne ad eam (sc sententiam) meditare, Cic where sententiam must be supplied from quid sentiam 11 Ea sc via or parte There Nep Liv also for
