Be patient says an Eastern proverb 'and the mulberry leaf will become satin'. The Author of this Volume fears that he has severely exercised the patience of many persons by whom its announcement was favourably received. He is not bold enough to apply the latter portion of the proverb to the quality of his work; but he fearlessly asserts that his own patience has been the most severely taxed, and he trusts that the arduous nature of his task will be deemed a sufficient excuse for the delay which has taken place.

None of the English Latin Dictionaries extant could be fitly adopted as the basis of the new one. The plan of these works is so imperfect and their Latin is of such doubtful quality, and often so decidedly bad, that they would have served rather to embarrass than to assist the present undertaking. This volume is in fact quite independent of its unsatisfactory predecessors. It has been composed with the aid of good Dictionaries of the English language — Latin English Lexicons and Dictionaries with reference to classical authorities — and Dictionaries in foreign Languages including the German Latin of Uncmann and others, and especially the French Latin of Noël.

Two leading objects have been kept in view throughout this Dictionary, namely to give good Latin, and to exhibit a complete English vocabulary, with the addition of meanings to such words as are often used in various acceptations. The meanings have been carefully divided and arranged. Readers will of course judge for themselves concerning the value of the whole work; but a brief notice of some things which have been done, or at least attempted, may not be altogether useless.

The Latin is classical; that is to say the words and phrases recommended in this Dictionary are such as occur in good Latin writers. Authorities are been copiously cited, but it has not been thought necessary to attach writers' names to all the common and well known words of the language.

English words expressive of ideas peculiar to modern times have received the best renderings which the Author could either find or devise; but these together indeed with the rest of the work he submits to the judgment of the learned with every apology for all imperfections, and with a very humble request for candour and indulgence. Many words however which at first sight appear purely modern, or for some reason, not capable of being directly expressed in Latin find in fact an exact and simple representative in some single word, or some very compendious phrase of a classical writer.

Barbarous or low Latin has been carefully excluded from the columns of this Dictionary; but in some instances when a bad word looks like a good one, or when such a word has received the sanction of existing English Latin Dictionaries, the inferior Latin has been given in a parenthesis with the name of a writer in whose works it may be found by way of caution. But the Author does not profess to have pursued this plan with respect to all the bad Latin which has been recommended by our earlier lexicographers; for, unfortunately, the words to which this description would apply are very numerous, and the continual task of warning the reader against the use of them would have been perhaps equally invidious and needless.

The English Vocabulary will be found it is hoped large enough. It is in substance, a list of English words, such as occur in our standard writers or are in lawful and general use at the present day. Some terms nearly or quite obsolete have been inserted, especially such as are met with in well known writers or in any English composition, likely to be proposed for translation into Latin.

The principal meanings of English words have been exhibited in such order as appeared best, but, for the sake of brevity, this system has not been extended to meanings which are either doubtful or uncommon. When a word occurs in any sense not noticed in its place, let the student consider by what other English word that meaning is expressed, and look for such word under its own head.

Many phrases and common combinations of English words have been quoted, and supplied with Latin renderings. But here some bounds were to be observed, and the Author was continually reminded that he had not undertaken to compile a Phrase book but to make a Dictionary. It was necessary also to keep down the bulk and price of the volume as much as might be consistent with the completeness of the work. In many cases, a phrase is given chiefly for the purpose of showing the use of some Latin word not previously mentioned.

It is always to be remembered that this book is designed as a COMPANION and in many respects simply as an INDEX to the corresponding LATIN ENGLISH DICTIONARY already published. The student is referred to that Dictionary for all additional information relating to the genders and inflexions, uses, government and construction of words, — the difference of synonyms, — turn and application of phrases — variations of style, — and whatever may facilitate elegant Latin composition.

The Author begs leave to return sincere thanks to numerous College and Private Tutors Heads of Schools and the Public at large for their exceedingly kind and favourable reception of his Latin English Dictionary to which he has thus had occasion to refer. His acknowledgments are due, more especially to those learned individuals who have kindly communicated their critical suggestions and remarks. The observations which have been sent to him by private channels, as well as those which have appeared in public reviews are equally scholar like and kind, nor will they fail to meet with all due attention.

The work is at last complete. The task of composing it has been wearisome as well as long. Let scholars and students treat the whole book according to their estimation of its worth.

The Author desires most devoutly to express his gratitude to the Giver of all Good, who has supplied him with health and strength during the period of nearly ten years in which the work of Latin Lexicography has been upon his hands. In dependence on the same Divine Providence, he devotes himself henceforth to labours purely theological and pastoral, such as are more congenial to his taste, and more strictly in accordance with his duty.
