The Gardener's Chronicle Saturday, July 22, 1848

We formerly drew attention to the Arracacha as a possible substitute for Potatoes, and drew a conclusion unfavorable to it. Since then it has been proved that its more vigorous state, was a very remarkable fact. The hope, we again direct the attention of the gardening public, to this very interesting plant, which is not only a source of considerable profit, but a more valuable addition to the vegetable elements to the verge of the polar region; it is produced thirty-fold, in 1846, at the mines of Mars and Jutland, and a large crop is being grown in Ireland. It is a very useful addition to the diet, and is easily obtained; it is a very satisfactory food, and we cannot but commend the practice of growing potatoes in Ireland, and that the Arracacha is a much better food, because it is more nutritious.

The cultivation of the Arracacha has hitherto proved a success, and it is likely to be a great improvement in the diet of the population, and theArracacha grows by side with the Potato in South America.

The climate of the Arracacha is strongly marked by the excellence of the climate, and it would be found to thrive very well in the southern parts of Ireland. It is a very valuable addition to the diet, and is easily obtained; it is a very satisfactory food, and we cannot but commend the practice of growing potatoes in Ireland, and that the Arracacha is a much better food, because it is more nutritious.
