

SMITH & PHILPOTS LIST OF SALES BY AUCTION.

THIS DAY—Sundries, and Narrow Black Cloth, Hosiers, Tweeds, Ven. Tops, Cootings, Hosiery and Underclothing, Silks, Cloths, Blankets, &c. &c. &c. &c.

Scotch which has always conformed to what we have considered the possibility of handing over the Kaffirs and the New Zealanders to the discipline of the law authorities; and that is the character of the warfare that would probably ensue.

The Courant.

SATURDAY, JANUARY 11, 1862.

There has been a violent shock of earthquake in Saxo-Vergis, falling according to the telegram—as far as Leipzig.

By the arrival of the Java's dispatches, we are enabled this morning to give the official correspondence in the diplomatic dispatches of the Trent affair.

There are, however, many minor but still important circumstances which present the analogy drawn by Mr. Adley between Virginia and Maryland in the seventeenth century, and Australia in the nineteenth, from being as perfect as it ought to be.

Mr. Greville, the late appointed Governor of New Zealand, had accepted, at the date of the latest Australian news, an invitation to a political conference with some of the native chiefs. Affairs in that colony are described as wearing "a peaceful aspect."

There are, however, many minor but still important circumstances which present the analogy drawn by Mr. Adley between Virginia and Maryland in the seventeenth century, and Australia in the nineteenth, from being as perfect as it ought to be.

Later intelligence from China confirms the rumor, published a few days ago in our telegraphic news, that a conspiracy had taken place at Peking.

There are, however, many minor but still important circumstances which present the analogy drawn by Mr. Adley between Virginia and Maryland in the seventeenth century, and Australia in the nineteenth, from being as perfect as it ought to be.

Later intelligence from China confirms the rumor, published a few days ago in our telegraphic news, that a conspiracy had taken place at Peking.

There are, however, many minor but still important circumstances which present the analogy drawn by Mr. Adley between Virginia and Maryland in the seventeenth century, and Australia in the nineteenth, from being as perfect as it ought to be.

Mr. Adley's design has at all events this merit, that it is scientific and not empirical. It is based in fact on principles which underlie the whole question of colonial dependence.

There are, however, many minor but still important circumstances which present the analogy drawn by Mr. Adley between Virginia and Maryland in the seventeenth century, and Australia in the nineteenth, from being as perfect as it ought to be.

Such was our primitive system, and such were its fruits, but it disappeared almost entirely with the loss of our American colonies.

There are, however, many minor but still important circumstances which present the analogy drawn by Mr. Adley between Virginia and Maryland in the seventeenth century, and Australia in the nineteenth, from being as perfect as it ought to be.

Mr. Adley is of course not ignorant of this change, but he does not see it as he does that the minds of the colonists must be prepared gradually for the withdrawal of British troops from their soil.

There are, however, many minor but still important circumstances which present the analogy drawn by Mr. Adley between Virginia and Maryland in the seventeenth century, and Australia in the nineteenth, from being as perfect as it ought to be.

Mr. Adley is of course not ignorant of this change, but he does not see it as he does that the minds of the colonists must be prepared gradually for the withdrawal of British troops from their soil.

There are, however, many minor but still important circumstances which present the analogy drawn by Mr. Adley between Virginia and Maryland in the seventeenth century, and Australia in the nineteenth, from being as perfect as it ought to be.

“SCOTLAND ACADEMIC SYMPOSIUM.”—The annual Symposium Academicus of the Principal and Professors of the University of Edinburgh, held yesterday in St. Andrew's Hall.

“HERRING—MAYBE REPAIRS.”—A committee of Professors met with the holders of the parish books on the subject of herring repairs.

“THE LATE MR. ROBERT JAMIESON.”—In the list of deaths in 1861, we notice an allusion to Mr. Robert Jamieson, a prominent herring fisherman.

“THE LATE MR. ROBERT JAMIESON.”—In the list of deaths in 1861, we notice an allusion to Mr. Robert Jamieson, a prominent herring fisherman.

“THE LATE MR. ROBERT JAMIESON.”—In the list of deaths in 1861, we notice an allusion to Mr. Robert Jamieson, a prominent herring fisherman.

“THE LATE MR. ROBERT JAMIESON.”—In the list of deaths in 1861, we notice an allusion to Mr. Robert Jamieson, a prominent herring fisherman.

“THE LATE MR. ROBERT JAMIESON.”—In the list of deaths in 1861, we notice an allusion to Mr. Robert Jamieson, a prominent herring fisherman.

“LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.”

“THE OPINION OF THE FIRST GRADE CLASS ON THEIR ‘GO-AHEAD’ PROFESSOR.”

“THE OPINION OF THE FIRST GRADE CLASS ON THEIR ‘GO-AHEAD’ PROFESSOR.”

“THE RELATION OF MAN TO THE LOWER ANIMALS.”

“THE RELATION OF MAN TO THE LOWER ANIMALS.”

“THE RELATION OF MAN TO THE LOWER ANIMALS.”

“THE RELATION OF MAN TO THE LOWER ANIMALS.”

“THE RELATION OF MAN TO THE LOWER ANIMALS.”

“THE RELATION OF MAN TO THE LOWER ANIMALS.”

“CITY PAROCHIAL BOARD.”

“CITY PAROCHIAL BOARD.”

“CITY PAROCHIAL BOARD.”

“Wool &c. Lanes.”

“Wool &c. Lanes.”

“Wool &c. Lanes.”

“Wool &c. Lanes.”

“Wool &c. Lanes.”

“Wool &c. Lanes.”

“Wool &c. Lanes.”

“Wool &c. Lanes.”

“Wool &c. Lanes.”

“Wool &c. Lanes.”

“Wool &c. Lanes.”

“Wool &c. Lanes.”

“Wool &c. Lanes.”

“Wool &c. Lanes.”

“Wool &c. Lanes.”

“Wool &c. Lanes.”

“Wool &c. Lanes.”

“Wool &c. Lanes.”