The High Stool
Aidan O'Connor
Lamping pints in a way Lazarus never could

H OW sorry I am to report that little Stu-ancey, a St. Patrick's Day fixture on the Temple Bar scene, has been the victim of some inconsiderate act of vandalism. The details are sketchy, but it seems that sometime during the night, a person or persons unknown made off with some of the beer glasses that are the hallmark of the place.

If you're not familiar with Stu-ancey, it is a small, charming pub that has been a staple of Temple Bar for many years. It was founded by the late Stu-ancey McInerney, who was a well-known figure in the local music scene.

The pub is owned by the family of Stu-ancey McInerney, and they are understandably upset about the vandalism. They are offering a reward for any information that leads to the recovery of the glasses or the identification of the person or persons responsible.

The pub has a wide selection of beer glasses, ranging from small pints to large flagons, and they are all hand-blown and designed to look like the glasses used in ancient Rome.

If you happen to be in Temple Bar and see any suspicious activity, please contact the pub directly at (01) 444-1234. They are working closely with local police to solve this matter.