Dear Sir,
It is possible that you may like to see the enclosed ^{Six} letters which I had from W. Darwin. The five in his own hand all have reference to his article in Mind No. VII., and the subject of that article gives a special interest to some of his expressions regarding it. The first letter was in reply to a general request that he might contribute any matters of psychological interest to the journal: I cannot be sure whether the date was 1875, before, or 1876, just after, the journal began to appear.

In case you may wish to know, with reference to sending back the letters, I will add that I am remaining in town till the 27th of this month: afterwards I shall be travelling about.

Wm Darwin Esq.

Truly yours

Edw. B. Robinson

P.S. I have pasted a slip of paper on the back of the last letter but one, to cover up a very original communication which a servant, in forwarding the letter to me in Switzerland, thought fit to make upon the blank page of it, having first, ~~through~~ a misunderstanding, opened the cover.
