The Patent Dowler Blade.

The new form of blade for figure skating. As shown in the above the sides are made concave so that it is thinnest, at or near the middle of its length, and widens out both ways towards the ends, the increase of thickness resulting from a gentle curvature to which the concavity is formed.

The Field says "This new form of skate blade gives the figure skater that which he has so long desired, namely the increased bearing surface and absence of friction which a nine or ten foot radius would give him in skating curves, combined with the facility of turning given by a skate having a seven foot radius."

Any Pattern Skate with these blades 3/- extra on advertised ordinary Prices.
