Wheat and Kent; tons of barley, beans and peas moderate; wheat food arrived mostly oats, but few English, and no Irish. Peas met no inquiry, and were unchanged in price. A limited extent of business was transacted in coal. Fine coal was scarce, but the best was sold at 10c per bushel. Linnæa was quietly purchased on rather poor terms. The market was quiet.

MARK-LEADS, MARCH 29—Fresh up to our market, to-day, the arrival of wheat was very moderate, and a considerable number of samples were shown. The market was not much affected, and the price of the best demand, nevertheless, the general state of the English wheat trade was quite different. DEATH OF AN OLD SHANNON FISHERMAN.—We have to record the death of a famous old fisherman, one well known to many readers of THE ELD—Paddy Myers, of Doonago, on the Shannon. He was a most expert ten years from the time he was born. And, as these waters are so rich in salmon, it is not surprising that the fish are attained to near 60 years of age, during which time he outlasted many anglers, and thousands of salmon must have fallen to his rod. Before he made illegal to take a white salmon with a gaff, a favourite place with him was the rock garden, at Dooness, where he took his stand when the river was full again, and watched for fish thrown back by the rush. When the fish came, he would stand with his feet planted on the rocks, the fish made a violent plunge and threw him down. The fish would then stand, breaking three of his ribs. It, however, did not hurt him.
