

Down Ampney
Cricklade

My dear Stewart

I am afraid you will think I have taken a long time in answering your questions, but we do find it so hard to observe Baby's expressions accurately, & besides I seldom can attend to his eyebrows, when he is crying and I am wanting to comfort him. I see my own eyebrow corners go up perfectly, and we are almost sure his. As the same is a left degree. when he is going to cry - but the transverse wrinkles on the forehead not straight but waving ^{downwards}

~~upwards~~ the lines converging towards the nose.

I cannot draw a face in the least.

Baby cries with tears now and certainly has done so for a long while, but when he began I cannot tell.

He is just over 6 months old.
I wish I could answer Uncle Charles's questions better, but if we can observe further more accurately, I will write again - I return the "Young Person."

Thank you for your Photo.
I like it very much indeed.

We have been very busy with our garden since we got home, it seems hard when we work so much, that we produce such very small results.

I am so glad I met you and Bessie at Little Hill, it is such a long while since we met.
How did your letter get to me when you had only put Down Ampney & some postmaster added Cricklade, with best love to Aunt Emma & Bessie Your affec. M. Vaughan Williams
